

NYSERDA

June 6, 2019

The New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) is convening an advisory group to share information and gather insights on issues facing the residential energy efficiency and clean energy markets. This Residential Market Advisory Group will serve as a source for identifying new ideas and strategies for the one-to-four family energy efficiency residential market.

We look forward to growing our partnership now and into the future!

Details on the first meeting are below. This is intended to be a recurring advisory group, and future meetings will be announced at a later date.

Register today, space is limited.

Who should attend:

Parties with business interests and focus on providing energy efficiency and clean energy solutions to the residential market.
